The executive committee of the Midwinter fair committee of twenty-five held a special meeting yesterday afternoon for the purpose of talking over ways and means with the soliciting committees named at the Saturday's meeting.

Members present: Grant, Scott, Ramberger, Gray and Snyder, of the executive committee; and Messrs. Rowe, O'Meara, Young, Snow, Cutler, J. F. Grant, Bechtel, Bennett, Coates, Salisbury, Downey and Adams, of the soliciting committees, were present and took part in the meeting, which was called to order by Chairman Grant at 4 o'clock.

Considerable time was spent in a general discussion of the best means of raising the money which will be necessary to properly represent Utah at the California Midwinter fair.

A large number of plans were suggested in addition to that of taking personal subscriptions, among them being a grand ball in the theater. The gentlemen were in great enthusiasm over the prospects, which seem extremely bright, and will go to work with a will. The matter of outside means of raising the money went over until the next meeting, but the secretary was instructed to draw up appropriate headings for subscription petitions and place them in the hands of the various committees, so that the work can be started at once.

they have received the promised reduction, it being in many cases as high as 5 per cent. On the main street of the city the rate is 7 1/2 per cent, which was formerly rated at 7 1/2 per cent, is now rated at 6 per cent. This is not due, however, to the fire department or the fire companies, but to the reduction of exposure, and a change in occupancy. Changes are being made in rates all the time, according to the conditions of the market, which is governed by the additional statistics gathered each year, and the showing of exposures and deficiencies made by the maps. The fire companies, on the life of insurance what ground the people of Brigham City base their complaints of increased rates. For seven years they have been enjoying rates which did not apply to the conditions of affairs which exist today. It was their gain then and our loss. The city was given full credit for the improved facilities of fighting fires, and the rates were lowered where the conditions which existed when the old map was made still maintained but increased according to the increase in exposure and deficiencies, with still 5 per cent. taken off.

MAKING EARLY PREPARATIONS. San Francisco to Have the Next Trans-Mississippi Congress.

When the Trans-Mississippi congress adjourned at Ogden last May it did so to meet again in San Francisco, the date to be fixed by the executive committee. The committee has named February 13, 1934, as the date of meeting, and already the citizens of San Francisco are bestirring themselves regarding the great convention.

A meeting of the committee on arrangements for the meeting of the Trans-Mississippi congress, which was held last night, at which delegates were present from the Produce exchange, the chamber of commerce, Oakland board of trade, League of Progress, Traffic association, Mechanics' institute and California state board of trade.

Chairman Parsons said the principal work to be accomplished was to raise the necessary funds to defray the expenses of the congress. He had seen Mayor Eliot, and that gentleman had asserted his hearty sympathy with the work, and had signified his intention to give it every assistance in his power. Indications pointed to a very successful meeting.

It was expected that a special train would come from Denver alone, and it would be necessary to show these people the improvements in the harbor, the rivers and in various localities in this section of the state.

At the convention in Ogden the expense was met by the city, outside the hotel and railroad fare of the delegates. He also told the delegates that the city of San Francisco had written him that his people were anxious to have the day set apart for that state at the Midwinter fair.

Mr. Parsons said that the convention would meet, and probably other states would look at the matter in the same light. It was estimated that the expense of the convention, including the publication of the proceedings, would not be less than $35,000.

Colin M. Boyd thought that it might as well be understood at the start that the city could not defray the expense for the purpose mentioned. It had no power to do so, and such action was expressly forbidden by the charter.

Hugh Craig thought it best to formulate a prospectus of the requirements of the congress so as to go before the public in the most effective manner. The people were to use the gentlemen of the world being "milked" so thoroughly nowadays that it would be difficult to raise any large sum of money for the benefit of the people.

Chairman Parsons said the truth was they had got the city "in the hole," as he expressed it, by bringing the congress here at the time for which it is set by reason of its occurring during the Midwinter fair. If he had known of the conflicting dates he would have pushed the matter through to the end.

Mr. Craig insisted upon the necessity of an itemized expense account and said that with such the money would be raised. It must be raised, he said.

The secretary reported that of the assessments of $50 levied on each of the bodies named heretofore only the chamber of commerce, Oakland board of trade and the Traffic association had paid the coin.

The chairman was finally authorized to appoint a finance committee of five persons to arrange this vexatious question in shape for proper presentation to the public and to take such other steps as it might find necessary.
